Cloverdale. Woman caught on video making racist remarks before alleged attack on protester over weekend

MATT KIELTYKA

Surrey RCMP are investigating the alleged racial abuse and physical assault of an animal-rights activist outside the Cloverdale Rodeo after a video was posted online.

The incident happened around 4 p.m. on Saturday as the victim was about to get into her car after protesting the rodeo.

The video, posted on YouTube under the title "Can anyone identify her??" shows a woman wearing a black hoodie and white-rimmed sunglasses approaching a cellphone camera in the middle of an ongoing altercation.

During the 48-second clip, the unidentified woman is heard making several rude comments about the protester's race while the protester records the exchange and says, "You'll be hearing from my lawyer."

A second woman, wearing a blue T-shirt, enters the frame and tries to lead the first woman away.

But the woman in black turns around and seems to spit at the protester and then assault her, just as the footage cuts out.

But there's more to the incident than the video shows, according to police.

Surrey RCMP spokesperson Cpl. Bert Paquet said the victim alleges she was then pulled to the ground by her hair as two others, a man and woman, joined in the assault.

The victim was treated for minor injuries.

RCMP hope the video, which was released on the victim's own accord, helps investigators identify the people involved. They encourage any witnesses to come forward.

"The racial component in the verbal exchange between the two are a concern for us," said Paquet. "We're looking at all the possible contributing factors."

Anyone with information about the incident is asked to call Surrey RCMP at 604-599-0502.

Story of Van space guitar is out of this world

Chris Hadfield promotion. Local company released a commemorative edition, and has already done $100,000 in sales

KATE WEBB
kate.webb@metronews.ca

Sales of a discontinued Vancouver-made guitar have skyrocketed since astronaut Chris Hadfield released a music video on May 12 of himself playing a rendition of David Bowie's Space Oddity on the International Space Station (ISS).

By now, more than 14 million people have watched the YouTube video of the Canadian commander playing the Larrivee parlour guitar while sitting in a tin can high above the world.

NASA purchased two of the three-quarter-size guitars more than a decade ago because of their compact size, but they were later discontinued. In response to a surge of interest in the P-01 model Hadfield plays in the video, the company has released a commemorative edition, and has already done $100,000 in sales.

"It makes us so proud," said Matthew Larrivee, one of the company's general managers, whose father, Jean Larrivee, founded the business in Toronto in 1967.

"Chris has just been such a great ambassador for guitar and for space. He's making space cool again, and that is so cool."

Before his last mission, Hadfield took a tour of Larrivee's Vancouver headquarters, and explained why NASA bought the guitars.

"When you're a long way from home, when you've left the planet, it's really important not just to take care of all the technical stuff, but you've got to take care of the people and the psychological side," Hadfield said.

"We have psych support people in Houston, and they realized that music is one of the things that's really fundamental to people, so they were looking for a guitar to put on the Space Station."

Hadfield estimates the Larrivee guitar has been around the world more than 50,000 times. The other one NASA bought stays on the ground as a physical record.

"Heck of a round-the-world tour," Hadfield quipped.

Orders pouring in

The reissued ISS Commemorative Edition of NASA's guitar retails for $1,200. Orders have been pouring in from around the world, particularly the U.S. and the U.K., a Larrivee GM says.

- "As a guitar maker, I just look at it and go, 'Boy, that is so neat I have a guitar on the Space Station,'" said Matthew Larrivee.

Let someone walk a mile in your shoes

Vancouver's less fortunate have a little more spring in their steps thanks to a local cobbler who has kept himself busy saving soles for the last 28 years.

Ronald Nijdam, owner of The Quick Cobbler, runs a program that has collected, repaired and donated more than 25,000 pairs of shoes to organizations serving the homeless, such as the Salvation Army and Downtown Eastside Women's Centre.

The operation is the only one of its kind in town, Nijdam said, and donations have recently peaked thanks to spring cleaning. Still, he adds, it never hurts to get more.

"People helping the homeless, those organizations, they never seem to say to us, 'Hey, you know what, we're full, we can't have any more,'" he said.

"They always take more, and on the other hand, there's so many shoes coming in to us, so somehow this is working."

Nijdam said he has heard lots of stories of people wearing his shoes to job interviews and being successful, or of cash-strapped single mothers grateful to be able to keep up with their kids' growth-spurts. He noted that kids shoes are especially popular since they rarely get worn out before they are outgrown.

He said a few weeks ago someone from Vancouver Island who heard about the program even started a drive to collect shoes and brought a whole van-load over containing thousands of them.

"(The employee who unloaded them) was busy for a full day," he chuckled.

Abbotsford. Drug users sue city over bylaw banning needle exchange

Three injection drug users filed a lawsuit on Tuesday over an Abbotsford bylaw that has banned harm-reduction services such as clean needle exchanges for the past eight years, arguing it violates their charter rights and needlessly puts them at risk.

The lawsuit comes as Abbotsford councillors study the future of the bylaw, which health officials say is preventing them from providing needle exchanges and supervised-injection sites in an area with some of the province's highest rates of overdose and infections of HIV and hepatitis C.

Scott Bernstein of Pivot Legal Society, which filed the suit on behalf of the trio, says council debate has dragged on for three years, with no sign that the city will repeal the bylaw. "From my clients' perspective, every day that this bylaw is on the books, it's putting their lives and their safety at risk," Bernstein said. "Every indication is that this council is dragging its feet and not moving quickly."

The bylaw was passed in 2005, amid the debate over the supervised-injection site in nearby Vancouver, which opened the previous year. The city began reviewing the bylaw in 2010 and has since ordered a series of studies and public consultations. A public hearing on the issue is expected in the fall.

Community groups have been quietly contravening the bylaw for years, passing out clean needles, crack pipes and other supplies without any attempt by the city to shut them down. But the bylaw has stopped the local health authority from implementing a formal, publicly funded harm-reduction program.

Plaintiffs

- The lawsuit involves Douglas Smith, Nadia Issel and Diana Knowles, who live in Abbotsford and use injection drugs, according to their statement of claim. The B.C./Yukon Association of Drug War Survivors is also listed as a plaintiff.

Manslaughter plea

Homeless man sentenced for stabbing girlfriend

A homeless, mentally ill Metro Vancouver man has been sentenced to four years and three months in prison after pleading guilty to the manslaughter of his girlfriend.

Alexander Laglace admitted to the May 2009 stabbing of Tammy-Lynn Cordone, 43, whose body was found at an encampment the pair shared in Lighthouse Park in West Vancouver.

Laglace was initially charged with second-degree murder but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of manslaughter last November.

He told investigators he had to kill Cordone because she would "freak out" if he left her alone.

The Crown was seeking a 10-year prison term.

Stumped no longer. RCMP move in after 15-month investigation

Three North Vancouver men face criminal charges over allegations two of them hired a third to deforest a patch of parkland to improve the view from their homes.

After a 15-month RCMP investigation, Hooman Bozorgnia, 41, Roger Mulloy, 54, and arborist Jeff Hoff, 33, have been charged with mischief over $5,000.

"In consultation with the District of North Vancouver, through maps, we determined whose land it was," said Cpl. Richard De Jong of the North Vancouver RCMP.

"As soon as we looked around we realized that this is actually in the Capilano River Regional Park," he said. "At that point, we realized that we had a criminal investigation here because it is parkland."

In February 2012, a park employee stumbled across the patch of 35 limbed and fallen trees, some up to 145 years old, and phoned the RCMP.

This prompted an investigation by a special RCMP team called the Forest Crimes Unit.

De Jong said the squad treated the area like a crime scene, collecting evidence to determine when and how the trees were chopped down.

De Jong said the unit estimates it will cost $50,000 to clear the debris and reforest the land.

The two North Vancouver properties sit on a hill overlooking the Capilano River.

RCMP were particularly concerned about the loss of the trees since they play an important role in holding the slope together.

Bozorgnia, Mulloy and Hoff are scheduled to appear in court on Wednesday.

Tequila: Lime, salt and sophistication?

Recipe for success.
Sales are up 8% as spirit promoters ditch frat boys in favour of the Real Housewives crowd

Once known solely as a lubricant for frat-house debauchery, tequila is increasingly making the rounds at high-end dinner parties and summer patios in B.C.

Nowhere is this transformation more evident than at the Vancouver International Tequila Expo (VITE), which has a mandate to "increase the presence of tequila in Western Canada."

Visitors to the show, which runs Friday at the Hyatt Regency, will have a chance to sip tequila from glass stemware, and watch expert mixologists shake up tequila-infused cocktails.

"We really are trying to change people's perceptions," said Eric Lorenz, founding partner of VITE.

"It's not something you have to cover up with lime and salt."

Tequila sales in B.C. pulled in $22.5 million in 2012 compared to $21.8 million in 2011 — an eight per cent increase.

"It doesn't seem like much, but eight per cent is a pretty big jump in the spirits industry," said Lorenz.

Lorenz is hopeful the Expo will continue to contribute to the uptick in tequila sales.

"I think we're going to see more high-end and ultra-premium brands."

HD Mining. Federal Court dismisses union challenge against B.C. foreign workers

Two unions may have lost a Federal Court battle disputing a mining company's plan to bring in 201 temporary foreign workers from China, but they're celebrating the spotlight they've shined on the problems associated with the employment program.

HD Mining International Ltd. had come under increased scrutiny after arguing there were no Canadians qualified to do specialized work at a planned underground coal mine in northeast British Columbia. In its successful application for temporary foreign workers it had said the ability to speak Mandarin was an essential requirement of the job.

Two unions — the Construction and Specialized Workers' Union, Local 1611, and International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 115 — were granted the right to seek a judicial review of the process used to grant the foreign worker permits for the Chinese miners.

They challenged in court the labour market opinions — documents that confirm a skilled labour shortage — issued by an official from Human Resources and Skills Development Canada in April 2012.

But Federal Court Justice Russel Zinn dismissed on Tuesday the application by the unions, which argued the federal official was fettered by supervisors who wanted a favourable ruling and concluded hiring the workers would not hurt the job prospects of Canadians.

Premier Kathleen Wynne expressed concern over the ongoing firestorm. "It's concerning to me if there are issues ... that get in the way of a government, a municipal government, being able to work in the best interest of the city," Wynne said when pressed. THE CANADIAN PRESS

PM tells caucus he's 'very upset'

Expense scandal. Some observers have painted Duffy crisis as the most serious test the Tories have faced since 2011's majority win

Stephen Harper addresses his caucus on Parliament Hill on Tuesday.
FRED CHARTRAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS

A "very upset" Prime Minister Stephen Harper tried to settle down a scandal-rattled Conservative caucus Tuesday with talk of accountability and Senate reform, but shed no new light on the $90,000 transaction that cost him his chief of staff.

Conservative MPs and senators heading into Tuesday's caucus meeting had hoped Harper would provide more facts behind the growing scandal that forced his right-hand man, Nigel Wright, to resign over the weekend.

But if Harper's speech — opened up on this occasion to the media — was any indication, they didn't get much.

"I don't think any of you are going to be very surprised to hear that I am not happy," Harper said in his first public comments since revelations last week that Wright wrote a personal cheque worth $90,000 to embattled Sen. Mike Duffy.

"I'm very upset about the conduct we have witnessed, the conduct of some parliamentarians and the conduct of my own office."

Harper didn't go into detail, however, about just how involved he or his office was in helping Duffy repay living expenses he shouldn't have claimed in the first place.

Nor did he go any farther behind closed doors; sources told The Canadian Press that while MPs pressed for more details during the meeting on his office's role in bailing out Duffy, they didn't get any.

The matter is in the hands of the federal ethics commissioner and the Senate ethics officer, who can be trusted to sort things out, many suggested.

"Trust me, they ask all the questions and they get to the bottom of the matters and that is the appropriate place, and that's where the ethics commissioner's report comes up," said Labour Minister Lisa Raitt.

Rescue efforts wind down in suburb torn asunder by tornado

Death toll lowered to 24. Early chaos led to initial report of 51 dead

Rescue workers neared the end of the search for survivors and the dead in the Oklahoma City suburb where a rare and powerful tornado claimed 24 lives. Residents of Moore began returning home, some of them finding empty lots cleared down to bare red earth in place of their homes.

Scientists concluded the twister was an EF5 on the enhanced Fujita scale, the most powerful type of twister, capable of lifting reinforced buildings off the ground.

After nearly 24 hours of searching, Moore's fire chief said he was confident there were no more bodies or survivors in the rubble.

"I'm 98 per cent sure," Gary Bird told reporters on Tuesday.

Emergency crews had trouble navigating devastated neighbourhoods because there were no street signs left. Some used smartphones or GPS devices to guide them.

The death toll was revised downward from 51 after the state medical examiner said some victims may have been counted twice in the confusion.

By Tuesday afternoon, every damaged home in Moore had been searched at least once, Bird said. His goal was to conduct three searches of each building, just to be certain.

The fire chief was hopeful that could be completed by nightfall, but efforts were being hampered by heavy rain.

Survivors emerged with harrowing accounts of the storm's wrath, which many endured as they shielded loved ones.

Chelsie McCumber grabbed her two-year-old son, wrapped him in jackets and covered him with a mattress before they squeezed into a coat closet. McCumber sang to her child when he complained it was getting hot inside the small space.

"I told him we're going to play tent in the closet," she said, beginning to cry.

"I just felt air so I knew the roof was gone," she said Tuesday, standing under the sky where her roof should have been. The home was littered with wet grey insulation and all of their belongings.

"When I got out, it was worse than I thought," she said.

From the air, large stretches of the town could be seen where every home had been cut to pieces. Also visible were large patches of red earth where the tornado scoured the land. Some tree trunks were still standing, but the winds ripped away their leaves, limbs and bark.

The National Weather Service said the tornado, which was on the ground for 40 minutes, possessed winds of at least 320 km/h and was nearly a kilometre wide. It was also the first EF5 tornado of the year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

School shelters

Plaza Towers Elementary, where seven children were killed, and another damaged school did not have storm shelters or safe rooms, said a member of the Department of Emergency Management.

- More than 100 schools in the state have safe rooms, but he added a shelter would not necessarily have saved more lives.

What lies ahead. Canuck storm chaser on the hunt

A Saskskatchewan-based storm chaser said he was close by when a massive tornado touched down in Moore, Okla., on Monday and continues to track the storm.

Greg Johnson said he left the suburb 20 minutes before the tornado hit.

"The reality is this wasn't just an event for Moore. Today is the fourth day of a storm system that has rolled through the southern plains," he said.

Johnson is chasing the storm system through Texas and said people are hyper-aware of the dangers of extreme weather.

Apple on hot seat over tax strategies

Billions saved? CEO Tim Cook denies report that says company uses Irish subsidiaries to dodge U.S. taxes

Quoted

"We pay all the taxes we owe — every single dollar. We don't depend on tax gimmicks."

Apple CEO Tim Cook, testifying before a U.S. Senate panel.

The U.S. Senate dragged Apple Inc., the world's most valuable company, into the debate over the U.S. tax code on Tuesday, grilling CEO Tim Cook over allegations that its Irish subsidiaries help the company avoid billions in U.S. taxes.

Cook said the subsidiaries have nothing to do with reducing its U.S. taxes, a message he struggled to convey to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

"We pay all the taxes we owe — every single dollar," Cook said. "We don't depend on tax gimmicks."

The Senate subcommittee released a report Monday that held up Apple as an example of the legal tax avoidance made possible by the U.S. tax code.

It estimates that Apple avoided at least $3.5 billion US in U.S. federal taxes in 2011 and $9 billion US in 2012 by using its tax strategy, and described a complex setup involving Irish subsidiaries as being a key element of this strategy.

But Cook said the Irish subsidiaries don't reduce the company's U.S. taxes at all. Rather, the company avoids paying the 35 per cent federal tax rate on profits made overseas by not bringing those profits back to the U.S., a practice it shares with other multinationals.

Apple's enormous, iPhone-fuelled profits mean that it has more cash stashed overseas than any other company: $102 billion US.

Cook reaffirmed Apple's position that given the current U.S. tax rate, it has no intention of bringing that cash back to the U.S. Like other companies, it has a responsibility to shareholders to pay as little as possible in taxes.

In effect, Apple is holding out for a lower corporate tax rate, and Cook spent some of his time in the spotlight to advocate for one, accompanied by a streamlining of the tax code to eliminate deductions and credits.

Smart guns. Controller can disable weapons via phone

A high-tech startup is wading into the gun-control debate with a wireless controller that would allow gun owners to know when their weapon is being moved — and disable it remotely.

The technology, but not an actual gun, was demonstrated Tuesday at a wireless technology conference in Las Vegas. It comes at a time when U.S. lawmakers are considering contentious smart-gun laws that would require new guns to include high-tech devices that limit who can fire them.

The new Yardarm Technologies system would trigger an alarm on an owner's cellphone if a gun is moved, and the owner could hit a button to activate the safety and disable the weapon. New guns would come with a microchip on the body and antennas winding around the grip. It would add about $50 US to the cost of a gun, and about $12 a year for the service. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RULE IS PAR FOR THE COURSE

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

Golf is one of those sports, like curling, that straddles the legitimate-activity fence.

To excel at golf, much skill is required.

To suck at golf, no skill is required. Believe me, I know.

At its highest level, golf is an exhibition of power, grace, skill and athleticism. At its lowest level — mine — it requires good timing so you can stop for snacks between the 9th and 10th hole without holding up the foursome behind you.

Golf is also susceptible to technology. Clubs now come with an adjustable loft, so you can dial up a shot as easily as hot soup from the microwave.

And golf balls are made of flubber — if you actually hit one, it goes a long way.

I've seen it done.

Push carts look like alien spacecraft with cup holders.

Golf has come far from the early days in Scotland when hairy, robust men used to stalk the bog with their mashie niblicks.

And if the belly putter is any indication, it's come too far.

The belly putter is a long-shafted club that you anchor (I'm not making this up) against your chest or belly, allowing for greater stability and therefore a better chance of getting the stupid little round ball in that stupid little round hole.

It looks pretty funny out here in Dufferville, but then what doesn't?

I once watched a guy take 12 shots to get his ball out of a sand trap. Then he calmly put his club back in the bag, picked up his ball, got into his cart and drove off the course, leaving his partner and the other members of his foursome slack-jawed with incredulity.

But the real problem is pro-level golf, where guys like Ernie Els, Adam Scott and Keegan Bradley have all gained a distinct advantage, and don't look good doing it.

It used to be that the biggest threat to golf's reputation was plaid pants, but as the belly or anchor putter bears an embarrassing resemblance to a crutch, it was obvious that it had to go.

As Tiger Woods so eloquently put it: "It should be mandatory to have to swing all 14 clubs."

That's easy for him to say. He actually has a swing. Most of us swing AT the ball, which is different.

So on Tuesday, golf banned the belly putter, effective Jan. 1, 2016.

Now it's up to the various pro tours and Dufferville to decide if they're going to swing free or die.

This is a hopeful sign that golf is pulling back from the brink of the absurd.

Who knows, maybe the golf lords will get staunch and ban the adjustable driver, which is kind of like having four or five extra clubs in your bag.

And once they get a firm grip on the clubs, how long before they take a swing at plaid pants?

Dangling by a tail

These adorable opossums haven't quite mastered their balance on this thin branch.

Thankfully, the baby marsupials managed to heave themselves to safety after a few minutes of clinging on.

The critters were spotted by nature photographer Ronald Wittek gathering around their mother's back on a game farm in Minnesota. For the photographer, the best part of the image is its composition.

"It was incredible to snap the marsupials in action," he said, adding that as adults they are too heavy and just use their tails to keep their balance. METRO

RE: Should You Introduce Your Kids To Religion? Published May 5 online

I have struggled with religion myself. We are a same-sex family, one being born into the Muslim religion and the other into the Catholic. Neither of these religions has given us acceptance or support. We see religion as a club for the elite, and we unfortunately are not the elite. Why would we expose our child to something that is so judgmental and doesn't accept us? She will make her own decision when she is ready, as we cannot teach her something we don't believe ourselves.

Burning that silly movie money by burning some serious rubber

Car chase movies. Fast and Furious 6 grabs the wheel this weekend but it's far from the only movie in its genre to hold the pole position

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

This weekend Fast and Furious 6, the latest high-octane installment of the car crazy franchise, hit screens.

Along with it will come squealing tires, revving engines and some of cinema's wildest car chases.

The auto chase is a movie staple, a tradition that dates back over 100 years of movie history.

The silent Keystone Cop films featured the first recorded car chases — a mix of slapstick, jalopies and rough-and-ready stunts — as far back as 1912.

Early Hollywood often played the chases for laughs. In The Bank Dick, W.C. Fields is taken hostage by a bank robber and forced to drive the getaway car.

In the chaotic chase that follows, the vehicle narrowly misses clipping the heads off bystanders as it flies over a ditch and slowly starts to disintegrate.

"The resale value of this car is going to be nil after you get over this trip," says Fields.

Emanuel Levy, an American film critic, said, "Bullitt contains one of the most exciting car chases in film history, a sequence that revolutionized Hollywood's standards."

Lasting just nine minutes and 42 seconds, the filming of the scene took three weeks pairing Steve McQueen's 1968 Ford Mustang 390 GT 2+2 Fastback against the villain's 1968 Dodge Charger 440 Magnum.

The chase was planned to run at 75 to 80 mph but ended up racing through the streets of San Francisco at speeds of more than 110 mph.

Several years later, The French Connection made Gene Hackman a star, won five Academy Awards and featured one of the greatest ever chase scenes.

The realistic looking chase was shot without permits on the streets of Bensonhurst, Brooklyn.

The sequence got a little too realistic for one car owner.

A hapless driver, at the corner of Stillwell Ave. and 86th St., who was unaware a film was being shot, was side swiped by Hackman's car.

Director William Friedkin liked the shot and paid off the driver on the spot.

Chase sequences have gotten more expensive since the early '70s.

Gone are the days where director John Hough could stage a wild chase between a lime green '69 Dodge Charger and a helicopter in Dirty Mary Crazy Larry for peanuts.

John Moore, director of A Good Day To Die Hard starring Bruce Willis, says the chase scene in that movie cost $11 million.

They destroyed 132 cars, damaged another 518 and even flattened a Lamborghini. That one hurt, he said. "I'm a car fanatic."

Gregory Smith. Taking a Rookie run at directing the boys in Blue

Rookie Blue actor Gregory Smith is taking the director's reigns. HANDOUT

It's no surprise, really, that Gregory Smith is directing episodes of the series he co-stars in, Rookie Blue. The Toronto-lensed cop drama returns for a fourth season May 23 on Global and ABC.

"He's a particular renaissance man," says Rookie Blue executive producer and showrunner Tassie Cameron. "He's one of those guys you discover suddenly that he's running some tech company out of his trailer, he's taking award-winning photographs from his travels to Africa ... he's just one of those people."

The Toronto-born, B.C.-raised actor, who turns 30 this summer, has been around TV and film sets almost his entire life. His father Maurice produced low-budget films and his teacher mother Terrea acted in some of them.

Before he was a teen, Smith was showing up on Vancouver-based TV shows such as The Commish, The Hat Squad and Highlander.

Over the years, he's also appeared in 25 films.

So when he was given an opportunity to become the first Rookie Blue cast member to direct last season, Smith jumped at it. He watched carefully the work of several directors, particularly executive producer David Wellington, studied their techniques and gave it a shot.

"That's basically how I learned everything as an actor," he says during an interview in his trailer on the set. "I was just a kid and I worked with these actors and I'd ask them questions and then something would work for me and I'd try to move forward with it."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Acting styles

Smith feels being on the other side of the camera now and then helps him communicate with other actors.

- Quote. "Acting is such a strange thing, it's different for everybody," he says. "No two processes are the same and no director understands the idiosyncrasies of the neuroses better than another actor."

Jason Newsted looks for his own brand of Justice

Metal health. Ex-Metallica bassist Jason Newsted is ready to stand on his own two feet, even if they feel a little shaky underneath him

LINDA LABAN
Metro World News

Though Jason Newsted has popped up in a few notable projects since quitting Metallica in 2001, his new band is all about him.

"It's a big deal," he says. "There's a few different hats I'm taking on: I'm the frontman, it's my songs, it's my voice."

It's also his name. In the tradition of Van Halen, Santana or even Bon Jovi, the name of the band is the same as the name of the man.

This is a bigger commitment than participating in Dave Navarro's made-for-reality-TV band, Rock Star Supernova and the bassist seems acutely aware of that.

"It's nervous excitement," he says. "It's a giant challenge."

Newsted formed six months ago when the band's namesake started writing songs with guitarist Jessie Farnsworth and drummer Jesus Mendez Jr., and they recorded a thrashy four-song EP as tight and terse as its title: Metal.

In February, Staind guitarist Mike Mushok joined and, though we couldn't get the band's leader to reveal its title, a full-length is ready for release by fall.

Through summer, Newsted has 70 gigs worldwide, including gigs in England, at the 100 Club and the Download Festival, the same two places he played in 1987, launching his first full-length with Metallica, entitled And Justice For All.

"I did retire from the big thing so I could do what I want with my life," he said about the decision.

"Jumping back into it is different from what I planned to do, but you have to create challenges when you have all the time in the world. This is the biggest that I've created for myself in a long time."

Jason Newsted knows that breaking up is hard to do. GETTY IMAGES

Moving on

Quitting Metallica wasn't easy for Newsted. But Metallica — driven and ambitious, but stung by the loss of original bassist Cliff Burton, whom Newsted replaced — was never an easy band to be in.

- Quote. "I am the man who had to step up and make that decision for everyone," Newsted emphasizes of his decision to leave in 2001. "It was me that suffered the most. It was me that made the giant sacrifice. It was a horrible, hard decision. I still, every couple of days, think about it even now. I was the first one into the show and the last one out. I wore a Metallica T-shirt onstage every night. I flew my colours, I was full-on dedicated."

Quote

"There's a few different hats I'm taking on: I'm the frontman, it's my songs, it's my voice."

The Word

Does Brad Pitt suffer from face blindness?

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Plenty of Hollywood stars probably have trouble remembering everyone they meet (they meet a lot of people).

Brad Pitt, however, thinks his poor memory might be an actual medical condition. He finds it nearly impossible to remember the faces of anyone he meets, he told Esquire.

For awhile, he tried being honest about his problem. "I took one year where I just said, This year, I'm just going to cop to it and say to people, 'OK, where did we meet?' But it just got worse. People were more offended. Every now and then, someone will give me context, and I'll say, 'Thank you for helping me.' But I piss more people off," the star says.

Brad says he's planning to get tested to find out if his forgetfulness is actually a mental condition called prosopagnosia, or face blindness. He has said that the condition means he doesn't go out anymore because of anxiety about the condition (and probably because he has six children).

So basically, Brad Pitt has a face everyone remembers whereas he can't remember anyone else's. Oh, the irony!

'Don't have a girlfriend,' dad advises Jaden Smith

Will Smith has clearly given son — and After Earth co-star — Jaden Smith a lot of advice, but one bit of wisdom sticks out: "Probably the best advice he's ever given me is, 'Don't have a girlfriend,'" Jaden tells E! News. "The stress is real." For his dad's part, it's less about stress and more about not closing yourself off to experiences. "Blending with another person is very difficult, and a lot of times you can lose yourself in the process," the elder Smith says. "So my encouragement to him is to be honest with anybody he interacts with. Don't make commitments that a 14-year-old can't live up to."

Heat up your summer with some cool Nashville vibes

Not all country. While you might think it's a honky-tonk town, Nashville is a hub for all kinds of music, culture and tasty food

You don't have to know how to two-step to fall for Nashville. The city recently rebranded itself from America's country music capital to Music City — and there's good reason.

It's a vibrant hub of up-and-coming singers, songwriters and musicians across genres, including pop, rock, gospel, bluegrass, jazz, classical, alt-country, blues and soul. And it offers an array of cultural, historical and foodie attractions that complement its musical backdrop.

Nashville has more than 120 live music venues; there's even a live music app (find it at musiccity.com) that uses your current location to find the nearest live music venue.

No trip to Nashville is complete without a stop at the legendary Bluebird Cafe. This listening venue has been around for 30 years, where up-and-coming musicians and the "songwriters behind the hits" showcase their talents in an acoustic song circle for fans and music execs alike. It's an intimate venue (only 100 seats), so get there early or make reservations online at bluebirdcafe.com.

Even if you're not into country music, it's worth checking out the clubs on Honky Tonk Alley — a breeding ground for young, hopeful performers. You'll hear everything from rock to alt-country and might even get a sneak peak of the next big thing.

One of the most famous, long-running honky tonks is Tootsie's Orchid Lounge, where Willie Nelson and Patsy Cline used to hang out. Robert's Western Wear is a boot store by day and honky tonk by night, where you'll hear some of the world's best rockabilly.

Or check out a show at the Grand Ole Opry, which began as a radio broadcast in 1925 and today serves as a live-entertainment venue honouring country music's legends and contemporary chart-toppers.

If you're a fan of Jack White, check out the Nashville location of his record label, Third Man Records, with a record store, live venue and analogue recording booth. Here you'll find an amazing collection of vinyl, most of which is produced by Jack White himself.

The newly opened Johnny Cash Museum is a tribute to the Man in Black — he's the only artist to have songs on the Billboard for six consecutive decades. With a treasure trove of memorabilia brought together under one roof, you'll find everything from Johnny's J-200 Gibson guitar to the lyrics he wrote in prison to Folsom Prison Blues (and the Grammy that came as a result).

Visit johnnycashmuseum.net for more info.

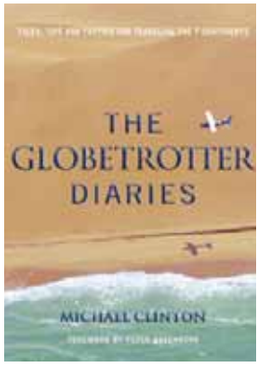
Metro World News in New York

According to Michael Clinton, Paris is a bucket list must-see. ISTOCK



As the president and publishing director of Hearst Magazines, Michael Clinton does more than hop on flights for work. He's a self-described "travelaholic." And in his new book The Globetrotter Diaries, which he bills as hybrid travel guide and memoir, he shares his travel tips coupled with insider insights on his favourite destinations. With summer right around the corner, we asked Clinton to share some of his insider knowledge with the rest of us.

Fly early

"Take the earliest flight out to avoid delays in traffic, security and flight departures," says Clinton. "That 6 a.m. flight might mean a brutal wake-up call in the middle of the night, but you'll know that your airplane is there and it'll be one of the first flights out before the airport gets too congested. You'll have no traffic and you'll get through security faster."

Bring your family into planning

Make sure that there is something for everyone while planning your vacation. "An unhappy teenager can ruin any vacation," he notes. "I've heard too many stories from parents who had a miserable trip because they were interested in visiting a place, but their kids didn't want to go there."

Go with the flow (but have a backup plan)

Embrace your inner globetrotter and see where your travels take you. "Half the fun of travel is the unexpected," he notes. But some surprises aren't always welcome: Be sure to "read the fine print for extra charges" as well as "always have a Plan B, as a plan can oftentimes fall apart."

Get points

"Build on your favourite airline premium status for upgrades, faster boarding and special treatment."

Pack light

"Carry on at all times, regardless of how long you will be away. Think black, think washables."

Family trips

What to see this summer

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Just in time for your family vacation there are a number of attractions making their debut this summer.

Located at the foot of the Olympic stadium tower, Montreal's $48 million Rio Tinto Alcan Planetarium houses two theatres: the Milky Way theatre, where visitors study and learn about the sky, and the more interactive Chaos Theatre. Visitors to the Chaos Theatre enjoy a 20-minute multimedia odyssey through the universe.

The complex includes numerous exhibits and the largest public collection of meteorites in Quebec.

Set to open later this summer, the Ripley's Aquarium of Canada is located at the base of Toronto's CN Tower and Rogers Centre.

The Aquarium will be one of the largest in North America, hosting 13,500 inhabitants, or approximately 450 species. The facility will feature a tropical reef tank and a 315-foot-long moving walkway, in a see-through tunnel, below a shark lagoon inhabited by sand tiger sharks.

If you are looking to enjoy nature this summer, you no longer need a car to get to the front gates of Ontario's best-loved outdoor retreats. The Park Bus has added a number of new routes this summer, including Fathom Five National Marine Park, taking customers directly from downtown Toronto to backcountry access points where you can hook up with outfitters and start your outdoor adventure.

FlyOver Canada at Vancouver's iconic Canada Place is getting lots of great buzz. Housed in the former IMAX theatre, it incorporates the latest in virtual flight-ride technology and is the first of its kind in the country. Up to 60 guests are strapped in their seats and elevated in front of a 20-metre-wide, sphere-shaped screen before embarking on a virtual 4D experience across the country. The adventure showcases a mix of seasons, magnificent landscapes and vibrant colours, all enhanced by wind, scents, mist and sound.

Named after world-renowned Canadian artist Robert Bateman, and located in the historic CPR Steamship Building in Victoria's Inner Harbour, the Robert Bateman Centre features educational space, a retail store and a gallery housing approximately 130 of his masterpieces, from his classic B.C. pieces to his famed Africa collection. Check out the collection of 36 of Bateman's bird pieces where, when visitors run their hands over the painting labels, the appropriate bird sounds resonate in the gallery.

Smuggle vegetables onto the warm weather menu with Fresh Summer Rolls

Fresh Summer Rolls

This recipe makes 16 rolls. MATTHEW MEAD/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

1. To make the dipping sauce, in a food processor or blender combine the peanut butter, hoisin, 2 tablespoons lime juice, scallions, soy sauce, sesame oil, hot sauce and water. Puree until smooth. Taste and add more lime juice or hot sauce if desired, and additional water if necessary to thin the sauce to a good dipping consistency. Transfer to a bowl and set aside.

2. To prepare rolls, in a small bowl combine the rice vinegar, sugar and a hefty pinch of salt. Whisk until the salt and sugar are dissolved. Add the carrots and cabbage and toss well. Set aside.

3. Fill a large bowl with hot water. Add 1 rice paper wrapper to the water and let soak for 10 to 15 seconds, or until just barely soft and pliable. Lay the wrapper flat on the counter. In the centre of the wrapper, place a small, oblong mound of the carrot-cabbage mixture, then top with a bit each of jicama, bell pepper and snow peas. Top with 2 mint leaves.

4. To fold the roll, start by folding the right and left sides of the wrapper over the fillings. Next, fold the end closest to you up over the fillings and sides. Holding the roll firmly, roll it away from you until the remaining wrapper is completely rolled up. Transfer the roll, seam side down, to a plate and cover with a damp paper towel. Repeat with the remaining wrappers and fillings.

5. The vegetable rolls can be made up to 4 hours ahead, covered with a damp paper towel and plastic wrap and chilled. Serve with the dipping sauce.

RACHEL MCKEE

A few months ago, a good friend of mine approached me about an internal job posting within his organization for which he was interested in applying.

He had been a video editor within this sports broadcasting company for four years and definitely needed more responsibility, a new challenge and something to give him renewed excitement about the organization and his field. He was hesitant to apply, as he'd been told that the individuals hiring already had someone in mind for the position and he felt that a fair amount of the job description was out of his skill set, as the job required producing experience. I encouraged him to apply regardless, as it would show upper management that he was looking to make lateral and/or vertical moves within the organization, that he wanted to be given more leadership opportunities and that he was looking to grow within this field. Ultimately, there was no harm in applying. His superiors wouldn't even know he was interested in the position if he didn't apply and likely hadn't considered him as a possibility for the job — not because he wasn't qualified or capable, but because he hadn't voiced any interest until this point. If you don't ask, you don't get.

My friend applied for the position and within two days he heard back from the hiring manager for the position. He had an interview three days later and, what do you know? He got the job! Two weeks later he set off on a month of travelling across Canada filming the fourth season of this station's signature show. He had new responsibilities, new networking opportunities, and the chance to learn new skills within his field — and he could not have been more pumped to get started! None of this would have happened if he had settled for the status quo and hadn't voiced his interest in this exciting new opportunity. He Spoke Up!

Think of it this way: it's more efficient and cost effective to teach a new skill to an eager, existing employee than to hire someone new to fill the gap. You'll be surprised to see the opportunities that become available to you by showing this initiative, enthusiasm and dedication in your organization.

Managers want ambitious people like you on their team and they always want to give you more responsibility. So speak up! ISTOCK

Loud and proud

Ways to speak up successfully

- Arrange a meeting with your manager/supervisor to discuss your long-term career vision
- Talk to your boss about ways for you to get more involved in your organization
- Apply for internal job postings
- Request to be put on certain project teams
- Tell your boss you are looking for more responsibility or that you want to acquire new skills —be specific!

Spurs tame Grizzlies in OT

Tony Parker had 15 points and a career playoff-high 18 assists, Tim Duncan scored San Antonio's first six points of overtime and the Spurs bounced back after squandering a 13-point lead in the fourth quarter to beat the Memphis Grizzlies 93-89 on Tuesday night.

The Spurs took a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference finals with Game 3 on Saturday in Memphis.

In overtime, the Grizzlies had a chance to tie after Jerryd Bayless hit a jumper and Parker missed one of two free throws with 14.6 seconds left, but Bayless' three-pointer from the left wing was off-target.

Bayless and Mike Conley each had 18 points to lead Memphis.

Sharks chomp away Kings' lead

Brent Burns helped San Jose jump off to a fast start with his second goal of the post-season and the Sharks tied their second-round series against Los Angeles at two games with a 2-1 victory over the Kings in Game 4 on Tuesday night.

Logan Couture followed up his overtime game-winner in Game 3 with his fifth power-play goal of the playoffs to add to the lead as the Sharks matched the Kings' two home wins to open the series with two of their own.

Mike Richards scored a power play for the Kings, who will host Game 5 on Thursday night.

Arceneaux renews relationship with B.C.

CFL. Lions agree to terms on deal with import receiver

cam.tucker@metronews.ca

After two years in the NFL, Emmanuel Arceneaux, seen here making a catch against the Tiger-Cats, is heading back to Vancouver after agreeing to terms with the Lions. KYLE CLAPHAM/B.C. LIONS

Wally Buono stated he wasn't going to take a past working relationship for granted. But he also acknowledged the value of such a thing.

The B.C. Lions officially announced Tuesday morning that the organization had agreed to terms on a deal with receiver Emmanuel Arceneaux, although news of the agreement broke Monday afternoon.

TSN reported that it was a two-year, $280,000 deal.

Arceneaux, who spent two seasons with the Lions in 2009 and 2010, is coming back to Vancouver after unsuccessful attempts to stick in the National Football League.

He will be reunited with Buono, the Lions' head coach three years ago and now the general manager and VP of football operations.

Buono and Arceneaux enjoyed a working relationship that extended beyond 2010, when Arceneaux ventured to the NFL.

It seems to have helped bring Arceneaux back to the Lions, even though there was no guarantee it would.

"It's not just me; it's the culture that we've created here," said Buono in a phone interview.

Quoted

"I think there comes a time and a place where you want to feel some love and you want to feel like you're wanted."

Lions GM Wally Buono, on Emmanuel Arceneaux

"I think it's not just a singular thing. I think it's like anything else when you've been rejected two, three, four times — it doesn't matter who you are, I think there comes a time and a place where you want to feel some love and you want to feel like you're wanted."

Arceneaux will turn 26 years old in September.

He fit in almost immediately during his first stint with the Lions, racking up 63 catches for 858 yards and seven touchdowns in 2009, his rookie year.

Arceneaux followed that up with 67 catches for 1,114 yards and five touchdowns in 2010.

"Manny has so much upside," said Buono.

"He's got a relationship with the quarterback (Travis Lulay). Jacques Chapdelaine, the offensive coaches, know what kind of receiver Manny is. Is he a better receiver today? I hope he is. I'm expecting him to be a better receiver and at the end of it we are expecting big things from him."

Space out in the 2014 Fiat 500L

Review. Fiat 500 gets a makeover to become roomier automobile

MALCOLM GUNN
wheelbasemedia.com

ALL PHOTOS WHEELBASEMEDIA.COM

2014 Fiat 500L

- Type. Four-door front-wheel drive compact wagon
- Engines (hp). 1.4-litre SOHC I4, turbocharged (160hp)
- Transmissions. Six speed manual, six speed twin clutch automated manual
- Base price (incl. destination) $26,000

Design

Physically, the 500L shares nothing with the 500 two-door, but it does exude a saucy character that's unmistakably Fiat. What really sticks out as unique are the 500L's double windshield pillars that are separated by a glass panel. Interesting, but there will likely be some criticism over forward visibility.

Fuel Economy

As of press time, fuel-economy numbers haven't been released, but a good guesstimate would be 7.8 l/100 km in the city and 5.2 on the highway for versions with the six-speed stick.

Engine

Fiat wisely chose not to install the 500's 101-horsepower 1.4-litre four-cylinder in North American versions of the 500L. Instead, the standard powerplant is the turbocharged 1.4 used in the sporty 500 Abarth. The engine pumps out 160 horsepower and 184 pound-feet of torque.

Fiat means business and that means making the 500 more appealing to North American small-car buyers by giving them more of what they really, really want. That's where the all-new 500L enters the picture.

Sure, the original "Cinquecento" two-door hatchback and its semi-convertible Cabrio and Abarth offshoots are kind of adorable. But let's face it; any car that's 15 centimetres shorter than a Mini Cooper is bound to be a tight fit, especially for anyone occupying the back seat. That's why the brand-extending Mini Clubman and Countryman were created and it's for the same reason that the four-door 500L will debut early this summer.

Making over the 500 to become the 500L meant employing a larger version of the 500's platform, called "small-wide." The tale of the tape reveals a gain of about 70 centimetres in overall length, about 15 centimetres in width and height and slightly more than 30 centimetres between the front and rear wheels, resulting in 42 per cent greater interior volume. You can almost hear six-footer-plus-types across the land cheering at this news.

The 500L is larger than its nearest rival, the four-door Mini Cooper Countryman, which translates into more passenger and luggage room.

Fiat has also fashioned the rear seat to accommodate three people, for a total of five (the Countryman is limited to four), although it will help if the meat-in-the-sandwich occupant is less than adult sized. Both the front and the 60:40 split rear seat can be folded when extra cargo space is called for.

Pricing is expected to come in at about $26,000 for base models but could reach into the $30,000 range when the automatic transmission and other popular options are factored in. Those are reasonable fees for an Italian-bred wagon that won't cramp your style, or you for that matter, while providing an abundance of style that matches its carrying capacity.

Autopilot. And here's a quartette of automotive stories to back that theory up

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Here are four automotive stories from the past week that all seem to speak to how fast and how slow our world is changing at the same time.

We need to change but for some things we won't — there is this constant struggle: must change versus must not change. Probably a good thing.

Another drive-in goes down
A 58-year-old drive-in theatre in Sharon, Ont., will not make it to its 59th year. Here is an excerpt from the North York Drive In's goodbye message posted on Facebook: "It is with much regret we say goodbye to summer evenings at North York. Technology and conversion to digital projection has made us obsolete and threatens many other independent theatres." Studios are phasing out the celluloid (or film) format. Theatres with film projector technology are going to have to go digital or go dark. While the family-owned North York Drive In decided against the considerable investment to digital, other drive-ins have made the move and are still alive and well.

Limos disguised as ambulances
The traffic in all the world's major cities keeps getting worse. Apparently the traffic is so bad in Moscow that VIPs are renting special limos to get around — those disguised as medical emergency vehicles. With sirens blazing they are able to get around the gridlock no problem. The ruse was uncovered when one ambulance was pulled over by police for traffic indiscretions and found to be transporting very healthy people in very comfy seating arrangements.

Driving Boom goes silent
A study just released by the U.S. Public Interest Research Group revealed that the post-war Driving Boom is kaput. We always thought "miles travelled per capita" would keep rising forever. But after peaking in 2004 it levelled off and now appears to be levelled off for good. Americans drive no more miles in total today than they did in 2004 and no more per person than they did in 1996.

Of course this is due to two demographics duking it out: baby boomers and their voluminous driving habits moving out of the picture, and the millenniums and their stingy driving habits moving more into the picture. Other contributing factors are urbanization, gas prices and less need for commuting in this digital age. The study's authors suggest U.S. legislators might want to rethink plans based on the premise that Americans will keep driving until they drop.

Cool keeps coming
Aston Martin celebrated its 100th anniversary by creating the CC100 Speedster Concept. The "speedster" genre (no top or windshield whatsoever, a race-ready convertible so to speak) was selected to channel the vibe of Aston Martin's most famous racer — the 1959 DBR1. But the old-school vibe is mated to a state-of-the-art carbon fibre body and interior. Like the Aston Martin supercar, the One 77, the CC100's carbon fibre pieces are crafted (by Canadians!) in the big oven at Multimatic, an auto engineering and parts builder based in Markham, Ontario. That's about 30km from the obsolete drive in theatre in Sharon.

Even under the vehicle must be aerodynamically sound. JIL MCINTOSH

Save some more dimes with smooth, smart designs

Driving Force. The aerodynamic shape of your car can save you money, so look for one with safety and style

drive@metronews.ca

Designing a sleek vehicle isn't just about good looks. A smooth design cuts down on wind resistance, which in turn helps improve fuel economy.

Aerodynamic designs may be obvious on sports cars, but they're also used on pickup trucks, where engineers face the complicated task of adding wind-cheating tricks without sacrificing work-oriented practicality.

"Air flows over a vehicle, around the side and under it, and you're trying to make it flow smoothly," says Jeff Luke, executive chief engineer for global trucks at General Motors. "If the air is turbulent, it results in more drag and it's less efficient aerodynamically."

A truck may have an upright grille and stance, but "that doesn't mean it's a brick," Luke says. The bumper and its lower air deflector, and the hood and windshield designs channel air around the truck. Headlights and fog lights are sealed so they deflect the air, instead of trapping it.

Air has to enter the grille to cool the engine, but the engine compartment is designed so the air flows out again, instead of pushing against the firewall.

Under the truck, engineers add body pans, which keep the air flowing so it doesn't create turbulence against the undercarriage components. If it swirls, it creates aerodynamic drag. This prevents the truck from easily moving forward and requires more fuel to overcome.

Air also has to move smoothly along the sides, where the door handles and window seals play a role. Windshield wipers and mirrors also have to be designed to reduce air swirling around them, which can create annoying wind noise at higher speeds. Even the wheels are designed with flush faces, instead of deep designs that can trap air.

At the rear, a lip on the tailgate helps direct airflow properly. Some people believe that driving with the tailgate down helps improve fuel economy but that's false, Luke says. Instead, the upright tailgate creates a pressure difference behind the cab. Air flows over this "air cushion," instead of swirling in the box and creating drag.

"It's all 'free' fuel economy," Luke says. "The more you focus on every count of aerodynamic drag, the lower you can make it, and so the more fuel you can save."

Quoted

"If the air is turbulent, it results in more drag, and it's less efficient aerodynamically."

Jeff Luke, executive chief engineer for global trucks at General Motors
On the effects of wind hitting a vehicle.

This truck doesn't look aerodynamic but it is due to its inner design. JIL MCINTOSH

Things to note

- Light. Body pans help reduce wind resistance under the vehicle but must be made of lightweight materials, since extra weight reduces fuel economy.
- Cover up. Adding a tonneau cover to a pickup truck can improve fuel economy by as much as a half-mile per gallon.
- Choose wisely. If you're towing a trailer, one with an angled front end will use less fuel than one with a flat face that pushes against the wind.
- Find a balance. A car that's too aerodynamic may not have enough headroom or visibility.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
If you are honest about what it is you desire then a friend will be honest with you about whether they can give it to you. Even if they can't, they may still be able to put you in touch with someone who can.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
It may seem as if you are out of step, logically and emotionally, with those around you. Maybe you are, but what of it? You are entitled to look at life any way you please.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Not everyone cares about what you care about, and why should they? All you need to realize is that one good person — that's you — can make a world of difference.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
The road you're travelling may not be of your own choosing but fate in its wisdom has pushed you in this direction so you would be wise not to fight against it. Worry less and life will be less of a struggle.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Others may be urging you to take a certain course of action but if your instincts tell you it's wrong then it's your instincts you must follow. It doesn't matter that you are unpopular, it matters only that you are right.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Before you get more of what you desire, it might be wise to create space by getting rid of what you no longer need. Why hold on to things you will most likely never use again?

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
What you think is a problem is in fact an opportunity in disguise. When you realize it, your mood will lighten and new opportunities will open up for you. You will soon be smiling.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The situation you face today is the same situation you faced yesterday. So why have you still not resolved it? Come on, you're a Scorpio. You're meant to be smart and decisive!

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Be careful what you ask for over the next 24 hours because you are likely to get it, but not in quite the way you expected. Come the eclipse in your sign this weekend, you may even want to give it back again.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
It would appear that you are involved in a feud and it is taking up far too much of your time and energy. Whatever it is about, you must get over it quickly. There are more important things to focus on.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Don't just assume that loved ones know how you feel. Tell them in words that make it impossible for them not to understand. Sometimes you can be a bit too cool.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
At home and at work you will get the chance to do good deeds today. Some of those who need your assistance may not be your favourite people but you'll help them anyway.
